LOOKS LIKE

TERMINAL SAYS FITZGERALD.

General Superintendent Admits That Baltimore & Ohio Will Likely Use Union Station.

SOMETHING DEFINITE IN MONTH

In His Reply When Pressed for Further Information—Visit of All the B. & O.'s

GENERAL SUPERINTENDENTS

To Wheeling Yesterday Was to Discuss and Provide for Uniform Schedules in the Future.

Since the Intelligencer learned from a semi-official source that the Baltimore & Ohio had applied to the Wheeling Terminal for permission to use its Union passenger station in this city, and exclusively chronicled the fact several weeks ago, efforts have been made to secure confirmation of the story from Baltimore & Ohio sources, but without success until yesterday afternoon, when a partial confirmation was obtained from General Superintendent Thomas Fitzgerald, of the Baltimore & Ohio. Mr. Fitzgerald and other officials had been here through the day conferring on schedule matters, and when an Intelligencer reporter finally ran down the general superintendent, he was stepping on the rear step of his already moving special train, starting on the return to Baltimore. Mr. Fitzgerald stood on the step, while the scribe footed it along the side of the car. The interview lasted about thirty seconds, but it brought out the first official admission that the Baltimore & Ohio is negotiating for entrance into the Terminal passenger terminal.

Interview Under Difficulties.

"What did the officials discuss?" inquired the reporter.

"Uniform schedules," was the reply.

"Wheeling people would like to know something about the Baltimore & Ohio's intentions regarding a new passenger station."

"Well, there's nothing to publish now, but you come to me in about a month and I'll give you a good story," responded the railroad official.

"But, you'll admit that it looks very much as though the Baltimore & Ohio will use the Terminal passenger station?"

"Yes, that's about right; it looks very much as though we would," was the very significant answer of the general superintendent.

Just at this point the reporter came to the conclusion that racing with a railroad train was not his particular forte, and gave up the attempt, but satisfied to know that the Baltimore & Ohio-Terminal deal story had finally received at least a partial confirmation from an official Baltimore & Ohio source.

Many Big Officials.

In the party of officials here yesterday, who came in on special cars that were side-tracked near the Warwick pottery, on the South Side, were nearly all of the prominent operating department officials of the entire Baltimore & Ohio system, including General Superintendent Thomas Fitzgerald, of Baltimore; General Superintendent Stewart, of Chicago; General Superintendent William Gibson, of Pittsburgh; D. F. Marony, of Baltimore, superintendent of transportation; Division Superintendent F. A. Husted, of Graton; Schedule Agent J. B. Frost, of Baltimore; Superintendent English, of the middle division, of Newark, Ohio, and General Superintendent Johnson, of Cleveland, with several minor officials.

The officials came here in pursuance to a regular call from the general offices of the company, for the purpose primarily of discussing the fall schedule. Heretofore, it is explained by one of the officials, the schedules on the different divisions of the system have not been got up in uniform style, and at yesterday's conference, a uniform style of schedule make-up was outlined, which will be followed by the officials of the several divisions in preparing the regular fall schedule this year and hereafter.

Unofficial Information.

Railroad officials always travel in style, and those who came to Wheeling yesterday were no exception to the rule. Of course they had their colored porters, and cooks, and naturally these men hear things on the side which they are supposed to pay no attention to. An Intelligencer reporter talked with one of these attaches just before the train departed for Baltimore, and the young man admitted that he knew that the Baltimore & Ohio would use the Terminal passenger station in Wheeling in the near future.

During their visit, the officials inspected the extensive works now in progress at the mouth of Wheeling creek. The stone piers at each bank of the creek are partially constructed, and excavation for the middle pier is now in progress, the men working now far below the surface of creek inside a coffer dam, from which the fast-entering water is ejected by an immense syphon pump. The improvements are very extensive, and on their face might indicate that the Baltimore & Ohio would use the old passenger station site on South street, but it is learned that all this work is being done for the purpose of giving the company increased facilities for the handling of freight at its freight station, also located on South street. It has no connection with a passenger station, unless the Baltimore & Ohio's application to use the Terminal station should be turned down by the Pennsylvania people, which is not within the range of probabilities. As General Superintendent Fitzgerald says, an official announcement of the company's plans may be expected soon.

AN INVESTIGATION

Of the Waterhouse Charges May Be Demanded at the Hands of Council By Chief of Police Clemans.

In addition to suing Councilman John Waterhouse for $25,000 damages, on the score of the latter's charge in open council last Tuesday night that the police were receiving bribes from the liquor dealers' association, it is learned that Chief Clemans is considering the advisability of demanding at the hands of council an investigation of the charges made by Mr. Waterhouse. Chief Clemans told a Democratic councilman that he would probably take this action.

CONGLAN DEAD.

Victim of Thursday's Cutting Scrape at Littleton Succumbs at Haskins' Hospital Last Night.

Just before 8 o'clock last night Dennis Conglan, the man who received severe cuts in the abdomen in an encounter with John Hixenbaugh, at Littleton, Thursday afternoon, died of his injuries. He was brought to Haskins' hospital yesterday, but it was evident that his case was hopeless. Peritonitis had already developed and the attending physicians simply did all in their power to ease the man's suffering.

This means that Hixenbaugh will doubtless be indicted for murder in Wetzel county.

THE STATE FAIR.

Many Entries Are Being Received in the Several Departments, and the Exhibits Will Eclipse Anything Seen at Former Fairs.

Entries are coming in rapidly in the several departments of the West Virginia state fair, which opens on September 10, and Secretary Hook, in the course of a chat yesterday afternoon, said he was confident that the coming fair would eclipse its predecessors in all departments.

The test of the electric lighting arrangements on the grounds for the night sessions, which was to have been given next Monday evening, has been postponed until later in the week, probably Thursday or Friday, owing to the inability of the Mountain State Electrical Company to finish the work earlier. Secretary Hook announces that if it is shown at the test that more than two of the 10,000, candle-power search lights are needed to illuminate the track during the hippodrome races, one or two additional search lights will be put in.

The entries in the several departments close as follows:

Speed department—September 4, at 11 p. m. Live stock—September 6, at 5 p. m. Poultry—September 10, at 2 p. m. Dog Show—September 8, at 5 p. m. Fruits and vegetables—September 10, at 10 a. m., except cut flowers, which close September 12, at 9 p. m. Jellies, flour, bread and cake department—September 10, at 5 p. m. Woman's work—September 8, at 5 p. m. Amateur photography—September 10.
